

183 Years Ago At Yorktown, Virginia

Colonial Coin, Medals, Witnesses To Glorious Past

THE shot "heard around the world" fired as a prelude to the battle of Lexington-Concord on the morning of April 19, 1775 sealed ineluctably the American Colonies' quest for Independence.

These events and the utterances of the 1776 Declaration of Independence, however, could not be considered effective and ultimate till the final blow was dealt to the British on October 19, 1781, where after the long siege of Yorktown, Lord Cornwallis surrendered his British Army to the combined French and American forces under the command of General George Washington.

It was during these engagements with the enemy that the Marquis de Lafayette quickly rose to fame as a competent and valiant commander. His small troupe of 3,250 men was to harass and elucidate the British war efforts for long months preceding Yorktown.

Lafayette's stand in Virginia against Cornwallis' personal command emerges as one of the crucial episodes of the entire campaign, although the role of Lafayette's force has often been described as "that of a terrier baiting a bull."

The last hours at Yorktown and the surrender are described by Charles E. Hatch, Jr.: "When the British flag of truce was seen by the allied officers on the morning of the 17th, the incessant and devastating artillery fire ceased. It had been continuous since October 9, except for short intervals when batteries were being shifted or a flag of truce was passing between the lines. Cornwallis' letter, which was transmitted immediately to Washington, read: 'I propose a cessation of hostilities for twenty four hours, and that two officers may be appointed by each side, to meet at Mr. Moore's house, to settle terms for the surrender of the posts of York and Gloucester.'

"Washington replied that he would grant the British general 2 hours in which to submit definite terms. At about 4:30 p.m., Cornwallis replied. Washington found his proposals satisfactory in part, and in his reply stated

Cornwallis' Parole

Charles Earl Cornwallis Lieutenant General of his Britannic Majesty's Forces.

Do acknowledge myself a Prisoner of War to the United States of America, and having permission from His Excellency General Washington, agreeable to Capitulation, to proceed to New York and Charlestown, or either, and to Europe.

Do pledge my Faith and the Word of Honor, that I will not do or say any thing injurious to the said United States or Armies thereof, or their Allies, until duly exchanged; I do further promise that whenever required, by the Commander in Chief of the American Army, or the Commissary of Prisoners for the same, I will repair to such place or places as they or either of them may require.

Given under my Hand at York Town 28th day of October 1781.

Cornwallis

that the British could expect that: 'The same Honors will be granted to the Surrendering Army as were granted (by the British) to the (American) Garrison of Charles Town (in 1780).

"Arrangements were concluded for the differences of opinion to be ironed out during a meeting of commissioners at the home of Augustine Moore in the rear of the first siege line. The commissioners (Lt. Col. Thomas Dundas and Maj. Alexander Ross, representing the British; the Viscount de Noailles, the French; and Lt. Col. John Laurens, the Americans) met there on October 18 and, after a heated and prolonged session, drafted the Articles of Capitulation. On the morning of the 19th, Washington reviewed the draft and after some modification, had the articles transcribed. The documents were then sent to Cornwallis for his signature, with a deadline of 11 a.m. Cornwallis duly signed, as did Capt. Thomas Symonds, representing the British naval units in the York. The allied commanders, Washington and Rochambeau, appear to have signed the document in captured British Redoubt No. 10. The Count de Barras, designated to act in place of the Count de Grasse for the French fleet, also signed for the allies.

"The articles provided that the troops, seamen, and marines should surrender as prisoners of war. Officers were to retain their sidearms and private papers and property. The soldiers were to be kept in prison camps in Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. Cornwallis and certain of the officers were to be allowed freedom on parole and the sloop Bonetta was to be made available for the British commander to carry dispatches to Sir Henry Clinton, after which she was to be surrendered.

"At noon on October 19, two redoubts southeast of Yorktown were occupied by allied troops — one by an American unit and the other by a French detachment. At 2 p.m., the British Army, clad in a new issue of uniforms and led by Brigadier General O'Hara (Cornwallis was ill), marched out from Yorktown along the York-Hampton Road to the tune of an old British march titled "The World Turned Upside Down."

"In the vicinity of the present national cemetery, O'Hara reached the head of the allied column. It appears that he sought first the Count de Rochambeau, but was referred to Washington. Washington, in turn, sent him to Major General Lincoln, who accepted his sword — the token of defeat and surrender — and then returned it. Following this, the British Army marched down Surrender Road between columns of allied troops, Americans on the British left (east) and French on the British right (west), to Surrender Field where the formal surrender was effected. ". . . we came directly onto a level field or large meadow, where . . . we . . . marched one regiment after another, stacked muskets and lay down all arms . . .", wrote one of

MacARTHUR SET

With the recent passing of General MacArthur, already there are plans to strike commemorative medals in his honor. The Philippine government was way ahead of us, in 1947 as a tribute to their liberator, two commemorative coins (peso and half peso) bearing his portrait were struck at the U.S. Mint in San Francisco.

The coins bear the date 1947 with the S-Mint mark below the date. Only 100,000 pieces of the one peso were struck and 200,000 of the half peso pieces were struck. We consider them to be greatly under-priced in relation to the small quantities minted. This coin should definitely be a part of every foreign coin collection, and we expect the day to come when they will be listed in the Guidebook of U.S. Coins along with other Philippine issues. The 1947-S Peso and Half Peso MacArthur coins belong in every U.S. collection as a tribute to a great American General. It is our belief that these coins will not be too plentiful in the very near future.

World "Trade-Dollars" In Retrospect

19th Century Experiment In International Convertibility

By: CHRISTIAN F. VERBEKE

The socio-economic function of metallic currency is perhaps the most neglected aspect of numismatics and unfortunately so, for in the process the initial and only meaning for issuance of money is often overlooked.

Albeit foreign trade is very much part of every American's life today, few if any attempts are made however to acquaint the average citizen with the rudiments of this facet of national survival. Considered from this premise it would appear logical how few remember that less than a century ago silver coins minted in crown or dollar size, referred to as "trade-dollars," were extensively used in settlement of foreign trade transactions. While not a precursor in the field, the role played by the United States trade dollar of 1873 remains of lasting significance in the annals of foreign commerce.

The history, the intrigues surrounding its issuance, and the controversy which led eventually to the discontinuation of the U. S. trade dollar, were covered in PACE of September 12 in an article entitled "The Short-Lived U. S. Trade Dollar, Forerunner of International Liquidity" by Christian Verbeke.

Reviewing briefly, however, the U. S. trade dollar was issued to facilitate trade with the Orient. Trade dollars were struck in silver 900 fine, weighing 420 grains. The same act which created the trade-dollar (Feb. 12, 1873) also omitted the regular silver dollar of 41½ grains of U. S. coinage. Coinage of trade-dollars was limited to export demand by the joint resolution of July 22, 1876.

The Bland-Allison act of February 28, 1878, restored the existence of the regular United States dollar, concurrently quantity production of the trade-dollar ceased. A few hundred proofs continued to be issued between 1879 and 1885; finally the act of March 3, 1887, did away irrevocably with the U. S. trade-dollar.

The story does not end there, however; for indeed even today the U. S. trade-dollar continues to show up in the shops of Hong-Kong and other places of the Orient, seldom perhaps but nonetheless as a symbol of American mercantile expansion of the 19th century. With the trade-dollar ended a distinct era of foreign commerce as new modes of financial settlement were developed. The American experiment was far from being unique however.

Indeed during the 1870's, the U. S. trade-dollar was to circulate side by side with the Mexican "pieces of eight," or 8 reales, in the Orient; in the same period a Japanese trade dollar was issued. To facilitate commerce in the Indo-China states, France issued the Piastre de commerce in 1879, followed in 1895 by Great Britain's trade-dollar assigned to the general Far Eastern trade.

The British trade-dollar proved of lasting success and was issued continuously between 1895 and 1913, successively in 1921, 1925, 1929, 1930, 1934, and 1935.

The Maria Theresa taler of 1780 struck in Austria can rightfully be considered a trade dollar although of unofficial status; it is still used as standard currency in most Red Sea countries and has been struck at different mints.

The origin of trade-dollars can be traced back directly to the Spanish piece of eight or 8 reales; indeed the opening of the New World was followed by the establishment of the Mexico City Mint in 1536. Spain's foreign trade with the Orient was conducted from Mexico through the port of Acapulco. Coins minted in Mexico were used in settlement of Spanish foreign trade transactions with China and the Philippines. Hence the quest for a standardized medium of exchange over the centuries.

The preponderance of the Mexican dollar as a successor to the Spanish 8 reales in the Far East was an accomplished fact by the mid eighteen hundreds. After gaining independence from Spain in 1823, Mexico issued the Republican 8 reales. The acceptance of the coin in the Orient was so overwhelming that attempts to decimalize in 1857 (Scale peso of 1869-1873 of equal intrinsic value) failed for export requirements and prompted the Mexican government to resume the old type "8R," in 1873.

For many years U. S. merchants established on the West Coast had felt the necessity for a U. S. trade-dollar to compete effectively with the Mexican dollar in Oriental trade. Thus far U. S. merchants were penalized by the necessity to acquire Mexican dollars at a premium to be used in international financial settlements. Thus originated the U. S. trade-dollar of 1873. History was to prove subsequently the failure of the experiment in spite of the initial acceptance of the trade-dollar abroad.

The U. S. trade-dollar failure in the Orient can be attributed directly to the declining silver prices in the 1870's, the difficulty in supplanting a popular currency widely accepted for three centuries, i.e., the 8 reales or Mexican dollar, the adoption of the gold standard by many nations, and last but not least, domestic suspicion and reluctance about a double standard silver dollar, i.e. 41½ grains and 420 grains.

A comprehensive study of the U. S. trade-dollar situation was made by the U. S. Silver commission of 1876. The secretary of the commission, Mr. George M. Weston "having been directed by the Commission to investigate and collate the facts, authorities, etc." relating to the trade-dollar prepared a series of papers including his findings "the utility to commerce" of the U. S. trade-dollar in the Orient. His report states:

"In December, 1876, Dr. Linderman, Director of the United States Mint, invited from the presidents of certain banks in San Francisco, facts and opinions in respect to the utility to commerce with China of the trade-dollars, which are called "Trades" on the Pacific coast. Louis McClane, president of the Nevada Bank of San Francisco, replied, December 28, 1876, as follows:

"They have the advantage of being legal tender in Foo-Chow, Saigon, Singapore, and Hong-Kong, and also are received in payment of customs duties at the three first-named ports, and at Canton. Have heretofore been weighed at Hong-Kong. Will be taken by count after the 1st proximo for sixty days as an experiment, probably as an entering wedge to its permanent adoption as a legal tender by count."

D. O. Mills, president of the Bank of California, replied, December 11, 1876:

"We understand the trade-dollar to be a legal tender at Canton, but at the other ports it passes as an ingot of silver, according to its weight and fineness. Our experience shows that the Chinese merchants give preference to the trade-dollars over drafts on China payable in local currency."

F. F. Low, president of the Anglo-California Bank, replied, December 12, 1876, that in China silver bullion, usually called "Sycee," is cast into ingots by the bankers and melters, each port having its peculiar standard or "touch"; that such ingots are current according to the weight of pure silver in them; that this weight is expressed in "taels" (the tael being about one ounce), and that the exact weight of the tael varies in the different ports. Mr. Low says further:

"Spanish dollars found their way into China when foreign trade commenced, and by usage became known to the people in all the maritime provinces. Their uniform weight and fineness soon fixed their value, as compared with the tael, and (they) were for many years almost exclusively used in settlement of purchases of tea and silk made for foreign merchants."

Subsequently Mexican dollars were introduced, and in course of time practically supplanted the Spanish dollar. Recently the trade-dollar of American coinage has been introduced. This coin was received with hesitation at first, but upon repeated tests of its weight and fineness being made, its intrinsic value became fixed, and at the present time it is received with great favor at the ports of Canton, Swatow, (Continued on Page 18) the British soldiers. Thus, the siege of Yorktown ended, the climax of the Revolution had passed, and America could look forward toward a free and independent status. A new nation had been born!

"After the surrender, the British units returned to Yorktown. After 2 days' rest, the rank and file and junior officers were marched off to prison camps in western Virginia and Maryland. Both Washington and Rochambeau invited their distinguished prisoners to their tables, and for several days camp dinners were the fashion, the English attending as guests.

The American units of the Allied armies took up the return march to the Hudson about Nov. 1. The French, for the most part, remained on the peninsula until spring and then left for Rhode Island, having wintered Yorktown, Williamsburg, Hampton, and other nearby points. De Grasse sailed for the West Indies shortly after the siege was over. The British expedition, which was to relieve Cornwallis, reached Virginia waters late in October, too late to be of any use."

It is ironical however that the event "virtually sued in 1899 for the Paris Exposition of 1900.

The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Lexington and Concord was commemorated by the issuance in 1925 of the Lexington-Concord Sesquicentennial half dollar. The following year the signing of the Declaration of Independence was commemorated by the Sesquicentennial of American Independence half dollar and two-and-a-half dollar gold pieces issued from June till November 1926.

Three facts making mint sealed bags of 1964 Canadian coins as good an investment as any have come to light during the past few months. First, we are not as yet involved in any date freeze. Second, the value of the Canadian dollar appears to be in for a higher value compared to U.S. dollar which will force an increase of about 5% in our prices and third this year is the last of the young head of Elizabeth on the coins. Put these facts together with the very low mintage compared to U.S. striking and the possibilities are unlimited. We won't be able to supply much longer so we suggest that you order now.

The Rising Cost Of Coinage Metals

Trends Indicate Further Debased World Currencies

By Christian F. Verbeke

Some two years ago, Congress approved elimination of tin in 1-cent pieces at the suggestion of Miss Adams, Director of the Mint, and in doing so showed remarkable foresight which resulted in savings of hundred thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money. Since passage of the measure, tin prices have doubled.

Indeed on September 5, 1962, Congress passed H. R. 11310 providing for the elimination of tin in 1-cent pieces and thus the alloy was modified to read: "The alloy of the 1-cent piece shall be 95 per centum of copper and 5 per centum of zinc" or by strict historical metallurgical definition, bronze. Passage of this piece of legislation was due mainly to the testimony given by Miss Eva Adams, Director of the Mint, before the subcommittee of the House Banking and Currency Committee on H.R. 11310 on May 23, 1962. In support of the elimination of tin, Miss Adams stated: "the law presently directs that the alloy of the one-cent piece shall be 95% copper, and 5% tin and zinc, in such proportions as shall be determined by the Director of the Mint." It has been the studied judgment of those who served as Directors of the Mint for twenty years past, according to Mint records, that the use of tin adds nothing to the quality of the coin produced. During World War II, tin was not available for coinage use. Under legislation enacted in 1942, the use of tin was eliminated from the one-cent piece, and an alloy of 95% copper and 5% zinc was used. This alloy proved entirely satisfactory as to the life, quality, and appearance of the coins produced.

After this emergency legislation expired, the use of tin was resumed, as specified by law. In the discretion of the Director, it has been used in infinitesimal quantities. However, the letter of the law has been respected by the addition of at least a small part of tin in the alloy, approximately 1/10 of 1%. Needless to say, the acquisition and processing of tin, which must be cut into small pieces for addition to the alloy, is time-consuming and costly, while adding nothing to the alloy. For your information, in calendar year 1961, we produced approximately 2,500,000,000 one-cent pieces, weighing approximately 17,200,000 pounds. The amount of tin in these coins, on the basis of the 1/10 of 1% amount in the alloy, was some 17,200 pounds. Tin presently costs $1.16 a pound, meaning that the Mint would purchase about $20,000 of tin per calendar year. On the other hand, zinc costs around 12c a pound. The tin we have been using is purchased through dealers, by invitation bids. These companies, as you are aware, must import tin, the primary source being the Malayan peninsula. No tin is produced in the United States. General Services Administration has some tin in their stockpile, I am advised; but

The year 1964 will be the scene of general elections in the United States and Britain. Regardless of the outcome, high on the agenda of both Congress and Parliament rank respectively redefinition of silver content for U.S. coinage, and decimalization for British coinage. Both are touchy subjects of equal significance on either side of the Atlantic.

What about the other nations across the world? Many changes are expected there too, perhaps not as crucial as for U.S. or Commonwealth currencies, nonetheless important; for perhaps the inhabitants of any South American or South-East-Asian country plagued with an already debased or worthless metallic currency may well see foisted upon themselves currency of even lower intrinsic value. The cause: Higher non-ferrous metal prices and there from resulting increased coinage cost.

the Congress has not authorized its sale. A word is appropriate as to the reason for the original legislation requiring some tin in the alloy. Historically, what we now call "bronze" was made of copper and tin, only. As improvements have been made, most of the alloys designated as bronze contain no tin. In addition, the present copper-zinc product is superior for purposes of design, and entirely satisfactory in quality, endurance, and appearance. Therefore, it would seem definitely in the public interest to remove the statutory requirements for the use of tin in the production of one-cent pieces." The testimony proved remarkably well informed of metals economics. Little did Miss Adams suspect that only months later tin prices would soar to $1.50 per pound, to reach recently $2 per pound. Without legislation, the vast expansion of minor coinage, particularly in the one-cent denomination, would have added at least $100,000 to an already overburdened Treasury budget appropriation, solely to continue the usage of tin.

Most eyes are focused on an acute and immediate Treasury problem: dwindling silver supplies. In reality however little or no attention is paid to the soaring prices of other classical coinage metals: Tin, copper, aluminum, zinc, and lead. Of these, copper and zinc are actively used in U.S. coinage. Fortunately, the logistics of minor coinage production, 1-cent denomination particularly, do not make present price increases critical although materials cost is hiked. Not till copper prices would exceed 35 cents a pound coupled with a drastic reduction in supplies could the problem be termed as critical to

U. S. mint operations. As outlined earlier, by eliminating tin the only likely area of high cost disappeared. The situation is not as simple when foreign mints are concerned however. Many of these fiat money prone institutions have succeeded over a period of less than twenty-five years to depart from a full bi-metallic or monometallic standard to resort to a fully debased coinage of the lowest intrinsic value e.g. iron, aluminum, zinc, etc.

Cost consciousness in these instances is a paramount consideration. How much higher non-ferrous metals' prices will affect already debased metallic currencies remains to be seen. However, chances are good to see the gradual elimination of tin by selected countries in their respective currencies.

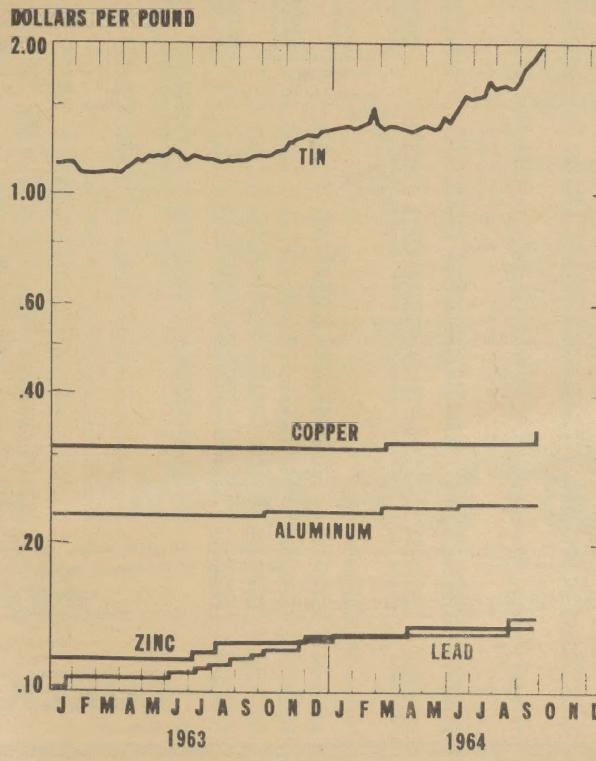

High on the list of tin users rank Japan and India. Of these, India has already adopted the copper-nickel alloy for its major coinage. Japan has retained silver 600 fine solely for its highest denomination of 100 yen. Both countries depend on tin imports for industrial usage.

The price performance of other non-ferrous metals aside tin has been aptly covered in the Monthly Economic letter of the First National City Bank of New York, October issue, which states in essence: Demand for many metals has risen faster than new supplies, with a resulting decline in producers' inventories and in government stockpiles. While labor disputes and political troubles have been factors holding down production, the higher prices, by and large, stem from the general over-all rise in business activity here and abroad. With the business upswing expected to continue strong in the months ahead, pressures for further price increases for metals are likely to mount.

Tin, as shown in the following chart, has had a most spectacular price rise, encouraged by political storm clouds overhanging Malaysia and Indonesia, labor trouble in Bolivia, a step-up in consumer demand throughout the world and some speculative purchases. Late last month, spot Straits tin at New York reached a record $2.00 per pound, versus $1.17½ a year ago. Basic to the price upsurge is an annual world production deficit of over 20,000 long tons and the depletion of buffer stocks controlled by the International Tin Agreement. Unfortunately for both producers and consumers, the prospect for any substantial rise in world tin production in the near future is rather bleak. Other than consumer resistance to high prices, recovery from slag materials and the use of substitutes, the only brake on tin prices appears to be U. S. Government stockpile sales, now limited to 20,000 tons per year.

Rare King George V Crowns

Of all coins of the world issued during the twentieth century the English crowns of King George V must rate a first place rank. This remarkable and short-lived series commenced in 1927 and was discontinued upon the death of King George V in 1936. With the solitary exception of the 1935 Jubilee commemorative crown all are great rarities . . . the most "common" (if that is an appropriate word) issued, the 1927, has a total mintage of just 15,000 pieces . . . and the rarest, the 1934, has a total mintage of just 921 pieces! Compare and evaluate George V crowns by any standards you wish . . . rarity, desirability, availability, popularity, or whatever . . . and you will come to the inevitable conclusion that here is one of the most underpriced series in the world today.

Complete Collection Of King George V Crowns

One coin of each date: 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936. The 1935 is a Jubilee coin with the exception of 1935 which is Unc. and the 1927 which is a choice Proof. An extremely rare and prizewinning collection of one of the most spectacular series in English coinage. (COMPLETE: $1495.00).

Important Key Dates In The English Series

The prizes of any date collection are the key low-mintage coins. While we have most American, Canadian, English and other twentieth century key date world coins by the twos and threes, it is seldom that one has the opportunity to buy such coins in worthwhile investment quantities . . . by the dozens or in larger lots.

Three of the rarest 20th century English bronze coins are the 1956 farthing and the pennies of 1950 and 1951. We offer choice selected pieces as follows:

1956 BU Farthings

The 1956 English farthing has a mintage of just 1,968,800 pieces . . . making it the lowest-mintage twentieth century farthing . . . the lowest mintage farthing since 1892! We offer choice BU gem 1956 farthings as per the following price schedule:

One choice BU $1.75	100 for $156.60
Ten for 16.50	1000 for 1495.00
25 for 40.00

The immense potential of the 1956 BU farthing at only $1.49 to $1.75 per coin becomes evident when you note that the 1956 farthing is over a half-million pieces rarer than the U.S. 1950-D nickel!

1950 English Pennies

The 1950 English penny has a mintage of only 257,513 pieces . . . less than that of the 1909-S V.D.B. United States cent. A most important opportunity to purchase one or more of these important coins. We offer choice selected EF specimens: One for $5.75; ten for $52.00; 100 for $495.00.

1951 English Pennies

The 1951 English penny is even rarer than the 1950 . . . with a mintage of just 140,000 it is a most important key coin in the British series. The mintage of the 1951 is less than a 1/3rd that of the 1909-S V.D.B. cent. We offer desirable specimens in two grades: EF and Brilliant Uncirculated. Sharp Extremely Fine pieces are available for $11.00 each; or buy ten for $99.00 or 100 for just $895.00. We have a few choice BU specimens on hand for $29.00 each; limit 20 pieces per order.

LIMITED MEMBERSHIP

Why limit membership. The most successful coin shows have a limited number of tables. A large show with 90 tables in a large room has an even flow of traffic. Picture the same room with 200 tables and you can see confusion and inefficiency.

This is why ACDE is the most successful money maker of all the various Teletypewriter systems in operation.

Cashdan's Coin Comments

Eliot J. Cashdan

THIS past week the Philadelphia Mint has been sending out notes to all people who have ordered 1964 proof sets advising them not to order sets for 1965 as there will be none made. These cards were made up from the IBM files that the Mint has used for the past couple of years. The interesting thing was the mention that there would be notification made if proof set manufacturing was resumed.

What this will do to the proof set market during the coming months we do not know, but we have noticed that all proof sets, even the early ones, have slacked off quite a bit during the past few weeks. The late date sets have dropped more percentage-wise than the earlier sets, but all of them are off. As we mentioned last week there are more people trying to sell coins at the present than there are people trying to buy coins, so it is a buyer's market.

We have many people asking what we recommend that they buy now, and that is a hard question to answer. Our usual answer is "Buy what you can afford." There are so many opportunities for investing in key and semi-key rolls of coins at this very moment that it would be hard to recommend anything in particular. Most coins are being offered at pretty good prices today and we would advise you to check around and compare prices and quality before you make a purchase.

It is also a good idea to check coins just like you would check a race horse before placing a bet. Check the past performance, see what the coin has done lately, and figure out the 'odds' of making a profit in a reasonable length of time. Also be sure that you do not buy something that is being offered at an inflated price or something that is just a promotion of a certain dealer or group of dealers.

We also advise against buying anything with the expectation of doubling your money overnight. Of course this sometimes happens, but it is the exception rather than the rule. After all, the average investor or collector buys from a dealer and either pays a commission to the dealer for purchasing the coins for him over the teletype or just buys at the dealers retail price. Therefore in order to sell the coins back to the dealer and even get your money back you have to wait for an increase in price of at least 10% depending on the coins you bought.

Investing should be done on a long term basis rather than a short term basis. In this manner you will realize capital gains when you sell your investment material, and you will have a built in profit after you hold on to your investment which enables you to wait for the most opportune moment to dispose of your coins. We advise you to beware of the dealer who offers merchandise to you with the assurance that you will only need to hold on to it for just a few weeks before you can sell it at a good profit.

There is a difference between investing in coins and speculating in coins, and we do not advise speculation although there are many people who speculate in the coin market quite similarly to the way people speculate in the stock market. We recommend leaving the speculation to the dealers who have more knowledge of what a coin may or may not do. Dealers buy coins that they expect to sell at a profit, and the average legitimate dealer has to keep buying all the time to keep his inventory up.

When a dealer likes a certain coin or series of coins and thinks that within the near future there will be a good chance to sell them at a good profit he will speculate and lay in a good supply of the item. Many times the dealer will guess wrong and find himself with a good supply of an item that nobody wants to buy even at the price that the dealer paid for it. Now this all depends on the individual dealer and his method of doing business, but the coin business is really very similar to any retail business that you can name, and some dealers when a situation like this arises will dispose of this merchandise at any price within reason and take a loss on it so they can rebuy other items they think will

Amoy, and Foo-Chow.

Indeed, so reliable has this coin proven, that the viceroys of the provinces of Kwang-tung and Fo-kien (in which the four ports above mentioned are situated) have ordered that they be received in payment of custom duties, at their standard value, as compared with the tael. At Hong-Kong they have been current at a premium over the local bank-paper currency, nearly or quite equal to that ruling for Mexican dollars.

The ignorance of the people regarding everything of a foreign origin makes them suspicious; hence, they always incline to adhere to the old and reject everything new; and in the matter of introducing new coins into China, the difficulty is enhanced in no small degree by the hostility of the native and foreign banks and bankers whose profits are lessened by the introduction and use of a coin of uniform weight and fineness." The basis upon which these trade-dollars are received at certain Chinese custom-houses will appear from the following proclamation, issued in October, 1873, by the governor-general of the two Kwang provinces, the governor of Kwang-tung, and the superintendent of customs for the Canton province:

"Whereas the foreign silver (coin) in daily use among the people of the Kwang-tung provinces has long been in circulation, and is moreover admitted to be advantageous and convenient. In the 5th and 11th years of Tung-Chih (1866 and 1872) the Hong-Kong mint coined a new dollar, which, upon comparison with pure silver, bore a proportion of fully 90 per cent, and as the records will prove. Proclamations were issued notifying the people that it might come into general circulation. There has lately come to Hong-Kong a newly coined American eagle-dollar called the "trade-dollar," and Sir Brooke Robertson, the British consul, having requested that officers might be appointed to assay it, the viceroy thereupon appointed officers to melt it down and assay it, in concert with an officer from the British consulate, when, taking the Haikwan tael of pure silver as the standard, an out-turn was obtained of fully 89.91; or, taels 111.6 of this new eagle-dollar are equal to 100 Haikwan taels of pure silver. Minutes of the assay were drawn up in proof thereof. For the convenience of traders and people, therefore, this coin should be allowed to be tendered in payment of duties at the rate or touch obtained at the assay, and to come into general circulation. It becomes the duty, then, of the viceroy and his colleagues to issue a proclamation on the subject for general information.

"This proclamation, therefore, is for the information of the public.

mation of you merchants, traders, soldiers, and people of every district. You must know that the eagle "trade-dollar," that has lately come to Hong-Kong, has been jointly assayed by officers specially appointed for the purpose, and it can be taken in payment of duties and come into general circulation. You must not look upon it with suspicion."

It is very clear that the trade-dollar has no recommendation for use in China over any silver coin which might have been struck at our mint, and that in particular it has none over the old American silver dollar. The Chinese accept silver coins only for the actual amount of pure silver which they contain. The trade-dollar contains 420 grains, nine-tenths fine. It would have been equally acceptable, on a proportionate valuation, at a weight of 350 grains, or of 412½ grains, which was that of the old American silver dollar. The trade-dollar was authorized by the same act (1873) which prohibited the coinage of the old dollar, and will become useless, and worse than useless, if the old dollar is revised. Two dollars of the same standard, but different weights, can only lead to confusion and discredit.

The trade-dollar appears to have been useful in the absence of a dollar, which is a tender and lawful money in this country, but it is attended with the inherent difficulty that it will not exist in sufficient stock to meet the wants of commerce, unless the Government keeps it in stock, and this involves a heavy expense in the loss of interest.

The trade-dollar not being a tender and money here, cannot be kept on hand by individuals or banks in San Francisco at a less expense than three-fourths of one per cent per month, reckoning the annual interest of money in that city at 9 per cent. At that rate of cost for keeping it in stock, either no quantity will be kept sufficient for the demands of Asiatic commerce, or if it is kept, the cost of keeping it will so enhance the price of the coin as to make it unavailable. McClane, in the letter before quoted from, points out the difficulty and suggests a remedy:

"If the mint had a sufficient number of Trades on hand to meet the demands for any one steamer for China, say $500,000, so that orders from London could be filled promptly and with certainty, the greater portion of our silver product available for export would be sent to China in the form of trade-dollars.

"It would seem from this that there is now no certainty of an ability in San Francisco to fill at once an order for even a sum comparatively so small as half a million of dollars. If dollars are useful at all in our Asiatic trade, there should be a capacity there to fill any day an order for ten times that amount. Such a capacity would exist if dollars were money, and therefore formed a part of the resources of banks and bankers. Undoubtedly also the Government could create such a capacity by a general rule of keeping on hand at the San Francisco mint five millions of trade-dollars. By borrowing the money for that purpose in cheaper markets for money, it could probably do this at a cost of one-half of 9 per cent per annum. The advantage to commerce may justify the expenditure, but it will be rendered unnecessary by the restoration of the old legal-tender dollar.

"The restoration of the American silver dollar to its old rights of coinage and tender would render it practicable to restore the Mexican dollar also to its old position as money in this country, a measure of immense importance to the commercial and financial interests of San Francisco. Being again money, it would always be in ample stock there, and its tendency, already manifested, to flow to that city rather than to London, would be increased and would become irresistible. The direct advantages of that, and its indirect advantages in stimulating the return trade to Mexico, are obvious.

"London is not a consuming market for silver, but an entrepot for it, and the London price is always the Asiatic price, less the costs of all kinds of sending it to Asia. As the price of silver in San Francisco must always be at least as high as the Asiatic price, less the cost of sending it to Asia, and as this cost must be less than the cost of sending it from London, it results that what may be called the natural price of silver, aside from its capacity as a tender, should be somewhat higher in San Francisco than in London.

"But at even equal prices, San Francisco should attract the bulk of the Mexican silver, inasmuch as the Mexican silver mines are nearest to the west coast, and as the Mexican silver shipments are most naturally made and are now in fact largely made from the west coast. These circumstances, tending to make San Francisco, rather than London, the receiving point of Mexican dollars, and the point from which to export those dollars to Asia, are already beginning to be felt, notwithstanding the advantages of London in capital and in long-established financial and commercial connections. The influence of these circumstances would receive a decisive addition if Mexican dollars were money in San Francisco. In the present position of things there is no demand for them except on or near the sailing-days of the Asiatic steamers, and not always then a sufficient demand to take off all the stock there may be on offer, and the surplus must in that case lie over till the next steamer-day. But for money there is a demand every day, and every hour of every day, and if Mexican dollars were money, the delay in realizing the value of an invoice of them received at San Francisco could never exceed the time consumed in carting them from the ship's side to a bank vault. That is a matter important everywhere, and especially important in San Francisco, where rates of interest are high, and will remain high for a long period."

The example of the U. S. trade-dollar failure was not to deter France from issuing its Piastre de Commerce. Issued from 1879-1885 for French Cochinchina (now part of South Viet Nam), it was succeeded by the French Indo-China Piastre de Commerce issue from 1885-1928. France however had the political advantage of (Continued on Page 20)

merce as a medium of circulation in Indo-China and force acceptance upon its inhabitants. The piastre de commerce was struck in silver 900 fine, weighing 27.215 grams. Fineness was reduced in 1896 to 835 and continued till 1928.

To facilitate its Oriental trade, Great Britain issued the British trade dollar in record number; between 1895 and 1913 an estimated 220 million trade-dollars were turned out. For exact figures see "British Dollar Mintages" by Stephen F. Christy in World Coins, October, 1964 issue. For additional information consult Jerome Remick's monograph on British Trade Dollars, and Willem's "The U. S. Trade Dollar."

The Japanese trade dollar experiment was short-lived and lasted from 1875 to 1877. The coin was struck in silver 900 fine, weighing 420 grains. Its issuance followed the U. S. trade dollar and ended in 1878 with the U. S. "trade." By 1892 the Japanese trade dollar was recalled because of its higher silver content than the Mexican dollar. Thus ended another era of foreign commerce.

Serial-collecting of British dollars, French Indo-China piastres, Japanese and U. S. trade dollars is practiced on a rather limited scale as the completion of such a collection is expensive. Type-collection of world trade dollars should prove an ideal vehicle to the average collector of modest means, and is strongly recommended at this time in view of the rather inexpensive prices for common dates.

and abroad. Following the settlement of strikes, which had plagued a major domestic producer since July 1, the U. S. producer price of refined electrolytic copper late last month was boosted 2 cents per pound to 34 cents, highest since early 1957. Prior to being raised to 32 cents in mid-March, the U. S. copper price had remained at 31 cents since May 1961, the longest period of stability in peacetime history. Although domestic copper producers were reluctant to boost prices in view of competitive substitutes, both metallic and nonmetallic, the pressures were too great to resist. These included the higher production costs arising from the labor settlements, scrap prices in excess of the refined quotation, reported pressure from the Chilean Government and the skyrocketing of prices in marginal markets. Domestic dealer copper, for example, has been selling as high as 55 cents per pound, while future prices in New York and quotations on the London Metal Exchange have also been far in excess of the producer price. The U. S. producer price was also out of line with the foreign producer price, which in mid-August was boosted 2 cents per pound to 32.5 cents, thereby bringing it 1/2 cent above the then U. S. price.

Thus, the rise in the latter, once major labor difficulties were resolved, was a foregone conclusion. Normally, the domestic producer price of copper, reflecting the U. S. import duty of 1.7 cents per pound, is above the foreign price.

Aluminum ingot prices have been marked up 1 cent per pound this year to 24 cents, in two rises of 1/2 cent each, the first in early March and the last in mid-June. Although primary aluminum production has been at or above theoretical capacity and shipments have been at record levels, price softness and discounts on a number of fabricated products have been in evidence from time to time. Should prices of fabricated products harden, a further rise in the aluminum ingot price could occur, particularly if foreign demand continues to grow. Aiding this possibility is the previously mentioned hike in the price of competing copper. Despite record rates of output and shipments, the current ingot price is well below 1960 and 1961 levels. An increase of some 320,000 tons in U. S. aluminum production capacity—equivalent to 12.5 per cent of the current total—is firmly on schedule, of which about one-fourth may be in operation by mid-1965.

Zinc has benefited from booming auto production and heavy demand for galvanized steel. With U. S. import quotas and higher prices abroad holding down the inflow of foreign concentrates and metal, domestic smelters' stocks of slab zinc on July 31 had been drawn down to less than a two weeks' supply and the lowest since April 1952. The release of 75,000 tons of U. S. Government stockpile zinc in August provided some relief, but many in the trade look for available supplies to become increasingly tight in the months ahead. After a markup of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent in late January by some producers failed to stick, the price of zinc (Prime Western, basis E. St. Louis) in mid-April was raised by this amount to the current 13.5 cents per pound, compared with 12.5 cents a year ago. In view of prospects for a continuing imbalance between supplies and demand, there are predictions of another hike in domestic zinc prices before too long. Consumers, fearful of possible shortages, are requesting the Government to release another 50,000 tons of stockpile zinc.

Lead has also been in relatively short supply, with industry stocks on July 31 reported at a 12% year low. After the domestic trade had time to digest 41,648 tons of metal made available in August from U. S. Government stocks, common grade lead at New York was marked up a cent to 14 cents a pound, a rise of nearly 50 per cent since the 15-year low of 9.5 cents that prevailed during most of 1962. In contrast to the relatively poor showing in the first half of 1964, demand from the battery industry in the second half of the year is expected to improve markedly. To meet this demand and other requirements, increased supplies from domestic sources, other than possible additional stockpile sales, are not in sight. Thus, domestic producers, although fearing further inroads by substitutes, had no alternative but to raise prices in order to attract as much foreign lead as possible (within the limits of import quotas) to this market. First National's report is not in itself an alarming document, although it makes allowances for possible higher metals prices in the future. Should substantially higher copper prices be witnessed in the near future, chances are high to see this metal disappear from the coinage of certain underprivileged nations especially in the African and Far East territories and in South America.

Only remaining alternatives in this instance would be recourse to aluminum, steel, perhaps even plastics, for coinage purposes. Outstanding examples of this course of action include: Chile, where the highest denomination (.10 escudo) weighs 8 grams of bronze-aluminum alloy; Cambodia, highest denomination 50 sen of 3.8 grams 95% aluminum; Brasil, highest denomination 2 Cruzeiros of 2.7 grams 99.5% aluminum. Other examples include Laos, New Caledonia, Indonesia, Taiwan and Argentina.

In the fast changing world of international currencies, every day brings news. The study and collection of foreign currencies is no longer limited to the privileged few. The broadening aspects of numismatics are bringing all fields of foreign currencies right to the collectors' and investors' doorsteps. Of particular interest asides of current foreign material: The collection by types and different compositions of metals and alloys, demonetized or obsolete foreign currencies, and transitional currencies.

have a better chance of selling.

When you are in the business you cannot have 'dead' merchandise on your shelves or you will soon be out of business. Other dealers when faced with a similar situation will decide to bury the merchandise or take it to their bank, get a loan on it and hold it until it can be sold at a reasonable profit. That is one of the big reasons for the seeming discrepancies in the advertised prices of certain coins. You may notice that some dealers are selling them for as much as 20% less than other dealers are offering the same coins for. The dealer with the lower price is probably trying to liquidate this particular item or series of items.

Wise investors can take advantage of this situation from time to time and pick up certain items at way under market prices. This happens quite frequently on the teletype exchanges and it is not unusual to notice a dealer offering a certain item at much less than other dealers.

There is also a big discrepancy in the buying prices of many dealers. You will find that some dealers offer as much as 25% more for certain items than other dealers are offering at the same time. The reason for this is that the dealer offering the higher price has the item already sold at a profit over what he is advertising to pay or else he has a feeling about this particular item and wants to be sure of buying some and putting them away for a hoped increase in price. This same dealer might be offering a lot less comparatively for certain other coins, so when you wish to sell something do not just check the offering prices on only a couple of items as you are very liable to come up with the wrong information of what dealers are offering to pay for these items.

Of course the teletype quotations in Pace every for the difference is that if a dealer bought a roll of 1885-CC dollars a few months ago over the teletype and paid $1200.00 for them, he is going to retail them singly over the counter for at least $70.00. Now that the rolls have dropped in price, this same dealer will still usually try to get the same price for the single coins regardless of the current teletype prices.

If he still has the entire roll and tries to sell it to another dealer he will have to take a loss now, but if the roll has been broken, the price will usually remain where it was in the first place.

We have noticed that many dealers raise their prices when something in their stock goes up, but very few of them will lower their prices when the same item goes down.

factory of solid fuels and gunpowder and for many other defense industry applications.

"For psychological reasons, he says, "some silver must be retained in our coins because if you take all the silver out, you take away a degree of confidence in the American monetary system. This would have a particular impact on the underdeveloped nations of the world which regard the U. S. as the bulwark of economic stability."

"Precious metals are a symbol in American, and world, coinage. Other metals wear better, some are more valuable, so those aren't the reasons gold and silver are used in coinage. It all comes down to the historical confidence people have had in precious metals."

PACE Editor Honored

Christian F. Verbeke editor of PACE addressed some 150 members of the Collectors Club of Boston at their monthly meeting, October 20th. Among other topics discussed, Mr. Verbeke spoke on the silver crisis and the strong emerging interest in foreign numismatic material. The talk ended with a lively question and answer session.

At this meeting, the Collectors Club of Boston honored Christian Verbeke by presenting him with an honorary life membership to their organization. The same honor went to Miss Eva Adams, Director of the U. S. Mint.

As announced in an earlier issue of PACE, Christian F. Verbeke conducted a class in numismatics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology (M.I.T.). The course, a series of 10 lectures, is sponsored by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; it has met with great interest and widespread participation. Over 150 students of numismatics have signed up for the course. Mr. Gould as the instructor (Copley Coin Co., and PACE columnist) has invited selected top authorities in the numismatic field for guest lectures.

Topics covered by Mr. Verbeke included the modern concepts of coin collecting and the expansion of interest in foreign coinage by U. S. collectors.

Stock pile copper authorized for mint according to a special report by American Metal Marker of October 27, 1964. It was announced by Edward A. McDermitt, Director of the Office of Emergency Planning, that some 30,000 tons of copper of the approximately 100,000 tons originally bought for the DPA funds would be made available for "intra-governmental" sale to the U. S. Mint. "The action," in response to a request from the mint to meet its coinage requirements brings to 50,000 tons, the quantity of copper sold to the mint from the DPA Inventory since May, 1954. Prior to 1960 the mint acquired most of its copper needs from commercial sources from the U. S.

ENGLEWOOD N. J. — A new store, BERGEN COUNTY STAMP AND COIN, has opened at 4 East Palisade Ave. in Englewood, New Jersey under the joint ownership of Herbert W. Sass and Anthony Pentifallo both of whom have been active in the trade for an extensive period of time.

A comprehensive stock of worldwide stamps and coins is available for beginning and advanced collectors as well as a full line of numismatic and philatelic supplies. An unusual feature of the store is a large self-service coin display exhibiting a wide range of U. S. coinage in various grades. The store prides itself on the specialized service it can render to collectors on numismatic problems and the same individual service is extended to stamp collectors. The store is opened Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and on Saturdays 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. It is located in a large shopping area on a direct route and only a short distance from the George Washington Bridge making it available to collectors in the New York area as well as New Jersey.

JORDAN recently announced that it would sell sets of its coins in uncirculated condition directly to collectors abroad, according to World Proof Collectors Association, Pittsburgh, Pa. M. M. Shilling, secretary-treasurer of W.P.C.A., revealed:

"Information from the Jordan Currency Board points out that they are prepared to dispatch a single set of the most recent minting of the Jordanian coins in uncirculated condition to individual collectors abroad; the export of more than one set to any one consignee cannot be permitted. A set comprises one piece of each of the following denominations: 100, 50, 20, 10, five and one fils.

"If the coins are to be dispatched by registered airmail the cost in U.S. $3; If by registered surface mail the price is $2." The spokesman for W.P.C.A. recommends a bank draft only. Bank drafts, certified checks or International postal money orders may be made payable to: Jordan Currency Board.

Shilling also revealed that the World Proof Collectors Association is growing in membership and that it recently issued its first bulletin, "Proof Collectors Corner."

Indianapolis Indiana — The Sesquicentennial Commission today invited all Indiana sculptors to enter the Indiana Sesquicentennial Medallion Competition.

All who are interested should submit photographs of their work to: Medallion Competition, Indiana Sesquicentennial Commission, 101 State Office Building, Indianapolis 4, Indiana. The deadline for entries is 12 Noon, November 17, 1964.

On the basis of the photographs submitted, the Advisory Committee of Artists, with the approval of the Commission's Executive Committee, will select five sculptors who will be requested to submit sketches of the Indiana Sesquicentennial medallion. Each of the five who submits sketches will receive $100.

The sculptor whose design is judged best will be commissioned to execute appropriate relief models for the reproduction of the Indiana Sesquicentennial medallion. Upon completion and acceptance of this work, the sculptor will receive $1,000.

Space City Averages:

How They Are Obtained

With close to 1,500 separate statistics appearing each week in PACE, a need exists to express this information in graphic form for busy readers.

We are currently charting eight different coin series each week as you see below. These charts are based on Space City Averages, an arbitrarily chosen group of rolls which we feel are representative of the total for that series.

To be included in the Space City Averages rolls are chosen on the basis of three factors: (1) their trading is constant, (2) they are widely held, and (3) they are indicative of the series.

It is obvious infrequently traded items, closely held items, and extremes in the series would not serve this purpose.

Each week the statistical staff of PACE prepares these averages from the information obtained on The American Numismatics Exchange transactions.

The amount expressed in the Space City averages is the total market bid prices for the rolls included in the averages. This is a dollar figure and is compared with previous week, month, and year figures for analysis.

The high and low for 1964 is also shown.

MARKET SUMMARY

OCTOBER 28, 1964

By R. N. Pevey

THIS weeks market closed with declines over advances 46 to 19 with 396 issues remaining unchanged. The Franklin half dollar series took the lead in volume trading only to record three advances and three declines with the largest being a two dollar advance by the 1953-D roll. Peace dollars recorded three advances and only one decline. The decline was a $100.00 drop in the 1934-S.

This however is not a major reduction for a $5,900.00 roll which is almost always traded in singles.

Lincoln cents managed to register six advances and eight declines as a result of very light trading with many offers to sell. The largest advance was five dollars on the 1960-P small date roll. The 1953-S roll scored a decline of $15.00.

Jefferson nickels were hit hard this week resulting from light trading and $50.00 declines recorded by the 1939-D and 1939-S rolls. These two rolls plus a $15.00 drop in the 1950-D roll aided in the $74.00 reduction of the nickel averages. All other rolls held their own with minimum price changes of two to five dollars.

Roosevelt dimes recorded six declines and no advance. The largest was a ten dollar drop in the 1949-P.

roll making its range $420.00 to $440.00. These series was also plagued with minimum trading.

Washington quarters and Franklin halves weathered the week posting three advances and three declines each. There two series controlled most of the market trading with the Washington quarter average reaching a new 1964 high of $1,066.00 due to a $15.00 gain over last week.

The morgan dollar average remained the same in spite of nine declines the largest being ten dollars.

Peace dollars closed mixed with three advances and one decline due to some purchasing interest.

Proof sets continued their downward trend with a two dollar drop in the average. The largest reduction recorded by the 1942-(6) of two dollars.

Circulated coinage took a back seat this week with most price changes taking place in the half dollar series. All changes were minor except a ten dollar reduction in the 1950-D nickel roll.

The Canadian Proof-Like set market registered five to one advances over declines. The largest being a $2.00 increase on the 1958 set.

The Market Opinion

The coin market showed some slight signs of leveling in three out of the eight series. Those being the quarter, half, and Peace dollar series. Although there was light trading there were some firm bid prices something we haven't seen for some time. This would tend to indicate that there are a few dealers who are purchasing for reasons other than immediate customer sale.

All in all this week was a definite improvement over last weeks market whether you attribute it to low volume trading, some dealer interest, or the purchasing of a few investor portfolios.

Next weeks market should show an even greater improvement due to the close of all the political races. Although, the decision of one candidate or another will not directly affect the coin market, a decision in general will.

Like the world series, politics have now taken the lime light as far as national interest is concerned.

Once these political races are decided we will again see interest return to the coin business. Dealers, collectors, and investors will prepare for the annual Christmas season.
